

Gina McGill is a writer, analyst, researcher, and activist. She obtained her bachelor's degree in from Wayne State University in Detroit and her Master's degree from the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. However, she enjoyed computers and taught herself how to write computer programs.

She loves animals and has two cats, Tiger and Brownie, and would build a sanctuary for strays if she could. One of her favorite shows is Columbo and she enjoys watching the Investigation Discovery channel.

In the past, Ms. McGill published research in a peer reviewed journal on lead and copper in drinking water to help protect our nation's children. Also, one of her proudest moments was when she received recognition from the United States Navy for her work on the Funeral Honors program for Navy veterans and active duty members killed in the line of duty.

Ms. McGill used her analytical and research skills to investigate the killing of Trayvon Martin.
